Sonoma County Resilience Fund activates for Glass Fire Incident

Since inception, the fund has supported local disaster recovery efforts through grants over $10 million to nonprofit organizations supporting disaster recovery

September 28, 2020 - Community Foundation Sonoma County (CFSC) first launched the Sonoma County Resilience Fund in the wake of the 2017 fires, with a mission to help support our community's mid- to long-term recovery from the disaster. Today, CFSC has granted over $10 million in grants to nonprofit organizations helping individuals impacted by disaster, healing the long-term effects of trauma, creating housing solutions for our community, and improving Sonoma County's emergency preparedness.

CFSC is activating the Sonoma County Resilience Fund again in response to the Glass Fire Incident, and is calling for donations to support fire recovery. Learn more or donate at sonomacf.org/resilience

Sonoma County has seen unimaginable hardship these past three years. A fire that destroyed over 5,300 homes in 2017, flooding and fire in 2019, and now the compounding burden of the coronavirus and massive wildfires coming at the same time.

The compounding effects of these disasters on our most vulnerable community members—people living on the economic brink, those who are homeless, undocumented people with limited English, and others, cannot be overstated.

"Disasters like this expose the inequities that already exist in our community and leave behind those who least able to recover. In short, disasters discriminate," explains Elizabeth Brown, President and CEO. "Through the Resilience Fund we are focused on helping ensure that no one is left behind by disasters."

In addressing the newest Glass Fire, CFSC is working closely with the Sonoma County Community Organizations Active in Disaster (Sonoma County COAD), a coordinating group for nonprofit organizations working as secondary disaster responders. During active disasters, the Sonoma County COAD operates alongside the Emergency Operation Center to assess urgent needs, identify short-term gaps and gather information that will inform longer-term recovery efforts.

CFSC's disaster response strategy includes supporting both immediate and long-term needs, by making grants to support:

- Emergency and immediate crisis response efforts to provide basics like emergency financial assistance and food.
- Addressing the long-term and complex impacts of disaster by supporting disaster recovery case management and financial assistance programs, mental health programs focused on trauma, bringing innovative housing solutions into our community, and helping to foster community preparedness efforts.

• Focusing on the long-term impacts of disaster and taking on the compounding effects of back-to-back disasters by providing steady and ongoing support to nonprofit organizations on the front lines of disaster work.

Examples of grants made from the Resilience Fund include:

- 2017 Fires —helping individuals and families recover through case management and financial support through grants to Catholic Charities and Community Action Partnership.
- Kincade Fire –helping stabilize our community through emergency grants to the Redwood Empire Food Bank, Corazon Healdsburg, and more.
- COVID-19 supporting the economic and health impacts of the coronavirus pandemic through grants to North Bay Organizing Project's UndocuFund, Humanidad Therapy & Education Services, and more.
- LNU Lightning Complex helping provide emergency financial assistance to families impacted by the fires.

About the Sonoma County Resilience Fund:

The Resilience Fund is the only long-term disaster recovery fund in Sonoma County. As of September 2020, the fund has granted out over $10 million for long-term recovery projects. Grants from the fund support nonprofit organizations working in four key focus areas: helping individuals impacted by disaster, healing the long-term impacts of trauma, housing solutions for our community, and emergency preparedness and community readiness.
